

32,240 "WANT" Ads. Gained
OVER MAY LAST YEAR.
READ JOURNAL "WANT" ADS. AND YOUR WANTS
WILL ALWAYS BE FILLED.

NEW YORK JOURNAL

AND ADVERTISER

ONLY THE JOURNAL
PRINTS ALL THE
AUCTION SALES.....
Advertised on Page 12.

AUCTION SALES

NO. 6,042. FRIDAY—Fair. Copyright, 1899, By New York Journal and Advertiser. —NEW YORK, JUNE 2, 1899.—14 PAGES. FRIDAY—Fair. PRICE ONE CENT In Greater New York, Elsewhere, and Jersey City. TWO CENTS.

BABY CLARK IS FOUND SAFE. BROUGHT HOME BY JOURNAL. NURSE GIRL NOW IN A CELL.

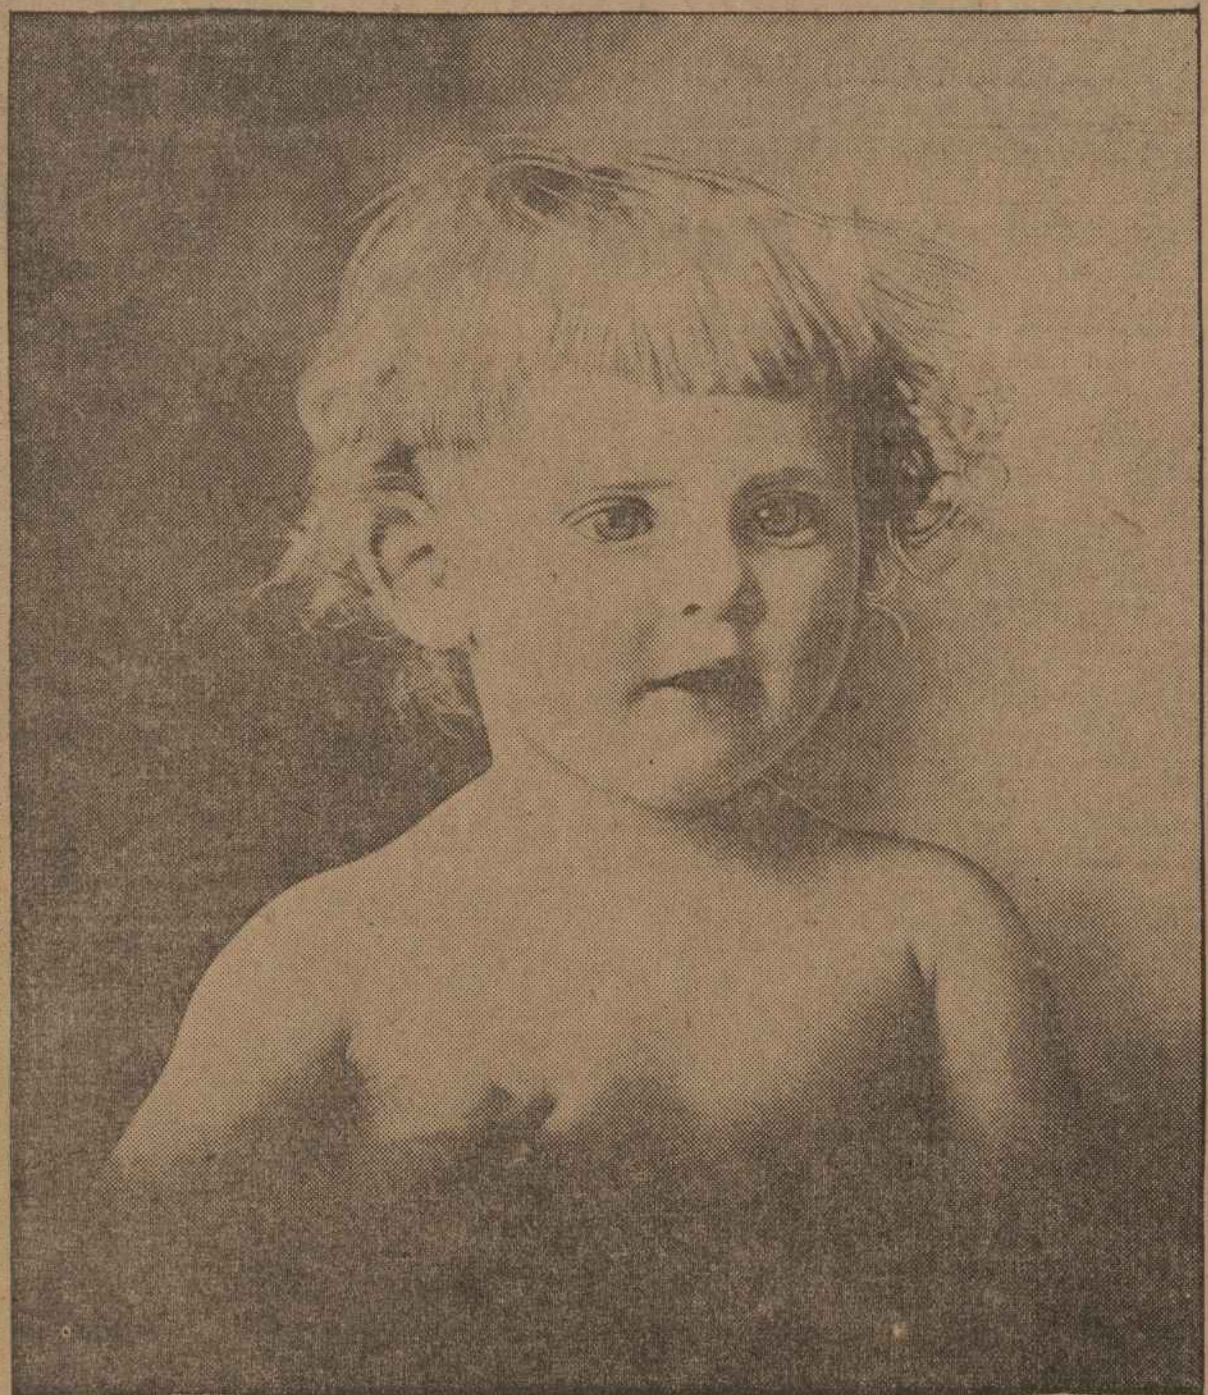

A Bright Postmistress Recognizes the Stolen Baby Through a Picture in the Journal and Promptly Puts a Country Sheriff on the Trail—The Baby, in the Custody of a Strange Man and Woman, Not Carrie Jones, Is Traced to a Lonely House in the Ramapo Hills—The Woman, Fearing the Sheriff, Denies All Knowledge of the Child, but the Man Weakens and Advises the Woman to Give Up the Child—She Does So, and Is Locked Up.

ARTHUR CLARK, THE GRATEFUL FATHER, THANKS THE JOURNAL.

I feel deeply the courtesy of the Journal in sending a special train for little Marion and myself. It was an act of kindly thoughtfulness, and relieved us from the crowd and excitement that otherwise would have marked our trip to New York and home. And I feel this the more, as little Marion was not well, and the relief from the excitement of a public train was a real boon. It was an act of genuine courtesy on the part of the Journal. —Statement by Arthur Clark, father of the stolen baby.

LITTLE MARION CLARK.

The Picture That Led to the Recovery of the Stolen Baby

JENNIE WILSON, THE WOMAN WHO HAD BABY CLARK.

Sketched on the Spot by a Journal Artist After the Child Was Taken from Her and She Was Led Off to the Jail at New City.

THE lost is found. Marion Clark is once more in her mother's arms. Through her picture, published broadcast by the Journal, she was discovered yesterday at St. John, a hamlet near Garnersville, N. Y. ✓18

When the law overtook her abductors, they proved to be a man and a woman. But the woman was not Carrie Jones. She is identified as Jennie Wilson, or McNally, once a school teacher in the vicinity.

The identification is due to the acumen of Mrs. Cary, postmistress at St. John. The woman brought the baby to the post office. From the picture published in the Journal Mrs. Cary recognized her.

Mrs. Cary notified Deputy Sheriff Charlston. He pursued the woman. She and the man were found at a farmhouse under the Ramapo hills. She denied that she had the baby. Charlston insisted, and the man told her to give it up. The baby was found in the rear room of the farmhouse.

It was Marion Clark, without doubt.

The woman was arrested. The man, who described himself as J. J. McNally, was allowed to es-

The news was telegraphed to New York. Detective Sergeant Herlihy was sent to Garnersville. Mr. Clark, the father, followed. At his heels went a special train, chartered by the Journal.

Mr. Clark reached Garnersville at 6:30 p. m. He at once identified the baby. He looked at the woman and said it was not Carrie Jones.

The Journal's special train was put at his service. It brought him and Marion to New York. Mr. Clark was overcome with gratitude. He thanked the Journal effusively for having found his child.

The news that Marion was safe and sound was given to Mrs. Clark by a reporter for the Journal. She was overwhelmed with joy.

Mr. Clark's return trip to New York was marked by an outpouring of congratulation. A big crowd was waiting at New York. It cheered tumultuously.

Mr. Clark drove at once to his home. The street was crowded. When the carriage drove up there was a shout of welcome. The mother, upstairs, heard it. She came to the window.

The scene the house was affecting. Mrs. Clark wept and laughed by turns. Outside, the crowd kept up its cheering.

When the mother had looked her baby all over to make sure that it was safe, she carried it to the window. There she held the baby up for the crowd to see. The crowd cheered itself hoarse.

Joy does not kill. Mrs. Clark has recovered instantly. She is still weak from anxiety, but no relapse is anticipated. The police are still working on the case. McNally surrendered later at Garnersville.

There is no trace of Carrie Jones. The police are mystified. Every effort will be made to locate her.